Dear Henry,

Thanks for sending me your National Review article and also the Joint Resolution you introduced. The Congress will have to judge but recent events seem to support the judgment that a smaller committee and tighter staff would improve both oversight and performance.

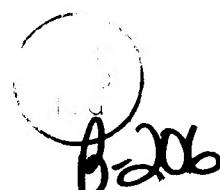

I will be pleased to cooperate whenever it will help.

Yours,

William J. Casey

Dear Bill:

I thought you might be interested in my article on the problems of Congressional intelligence oversight which appears on page 46 of the enclosed National Review.

As mentioned in this piece, I believe its time we seriously consider merging the existing Intelligence Committees of the House and Senate into a streamlined Joint Committee on Intelligence. I have already introduced H.J. Res. 633 to accomplish this, but I don't expect much to happen on this legislation before next year.

Cordially

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence
FROM: Charles A. Briggs
Director, Office of Legislative Liaison
SUBJECT: Representative Hyde's Proposal for
Establishment of One Joint Oversight Committee

1. Attached for your review and information is House Joint Resolution 633, which was recently introduced by Representative Hyde and provides for the establishment of one Joint Oversight Committee on Intelligence. Under this proposal, one oversight committee would be created which would be composed of 18 members, nine each from the Senate and the House, who would serve for a six year term. The Chairmanship of the Joint Committee would be rotated between the Senate and the House. In introducing this resolution, Representative Hyde stated that a single Joint Committee would hopefully reduce the number of unauthorized leaks, the political partisanship that has recently surrounded controversial intelligence activities and would provide a single point of contact and consultation for the Agency on intelligence matters.

2. I will be happy to discuss Representative Hyde's proposal with you at your convenience.

/s/Charles A. Briggs
